

Call for Papers

Kindai Management Review is the bulletin of the Institute for Creative Management and Innovation (ICMI) at Kindai University in Japan. The first volume (only inaugural issue) was published by Maruzen Planet in February 2013. We are now calling for submissions to be reviewed for possible inclusion in Volume 6. Everybody who is a researcher, practitioner or Ph.D. candidate in management is welcome to submit a paper. However, it is limited to an unpublished paper. And the copyright of papers published in the journal belong to Kinki University.

Kindai Management Review plays two roles. One is to promote the results of research on management in Japan to the world. The other is to receive new theories and methods of management that were developed elsewhere in the world and introduce them into Japan.

Kindai Management Review is a refereed journal. We welcome original papers that have not been published elsewhere that are related to the following topics

- Creative management and open innovation
- Knowledge creation theory (Nonaka Theory) and knowledge management
- Enterprise's sustainable growth and new business model
- Venture business and entrepreneurship education
- Research on people (management scholar or practitioner, for example, Peter Drucker or Steve Jobs) and management history
- Global management and competitive strategy
- Marketing and customer
- Human resource management and creativity development
- Learning organization and organizational behavior
- Intellectual asset and accounting innovation
- Corporate culture and management philosophy
- Corporate governance and corporate social responsibility
- Other research about new theory or method on management
